May Be Penalised For Neutrality

FORESHADOWING a period of greater emergency after the war, in which further sacrifices would be required to maintain the national position, Mr. de Valera, in the course of a comprehensive review of the political and economic situation, in the Mansion House last night, at the annual meeting of the Fianna Fail Ard Fheis, adverted to the possibility of attempts to penalise the country because of its neutral stand.

"There are a number of people," he said, "who do not like our attitude of neutrality. We have got to look ahead to the time in which efforts may be made in some way or other to penalise us because we have taken that attitude. Just as we have met the present crisis, so we can meet any such crisis if we stand together."

The Taoiseach, commenting on the decline in the acreage under wheat, held that the Government could not be blamed, and said:—"We have to call now upon our barley, which means that the export trade of one of our greatest exporting firms is going to be injured, and no matter how much we value our export trade, the supply of bread must come before it."

Describing the abolishing of partition as the only outstanding political objective, he said:—"No Irishman worthy of the name of being Irish wants partition, and in that you have the best security that it will ultimately go as a number of other things repugnant to the feelings of our people have gone. I don't want to speak about it any more. There is nobody in the country who does not believe that everything humanly possible to get rid of that we shall do. There are, of course, prices which we are not prepared to pay, even for the abolition of partition. We have a right to the unity of our country, and we have a right to the independent action of our people also. We are not going to sacrifice one of these rights in order to obtain the other. Both are due to us. I don't think that talk will help much at the present time. All I can promise is that we will try to do everything we can to bring the wrong of partition to the notice of all those who have any power to remedy it.

LANGUAGE

Mr. de Valera devoted considerable time to the question of the restoration of the language, a feature of his remarks being an admonition to the Irish-speaking critics, and he made the point that the language sometimes was unfortunate in the people who advocated it—people who seemed to be doing their utmost to turn people away from the language. He believed, he said, that the great majority of the people wanted it, but they were not willing to make the sacrifices necessary to have it. If they did not make those sacrifices the language would be lost, and with it would go nationhood. He claimed, however, that the drive had gone farther than most people realised, because the difficulties of the beginnings had largely been got over, and the gap that still was left open was the after-school period.

Speaking of the immediate past and the present position, the Taoiseach laid stress on the good fortune of the country up to now. The nation, he said, would be in danger until the last shot was fired, and they ought not be so foolish even now to waste opportunity given them to perfect the training of man-power and the strength of defence. "This nation," he said, "will have reason to thank Almighty God very sincerely if it gets through the whole of this crisis as it has got through up to now."

FOOD POSITION

Turning to the food position, he said:—"It is a terrible thing to think that this agricultural country should be short of agricultural commodities, but what can the Government do? Last year, by fixing a fair price, and with a campaign among the farmers, we got up to 560,000 acres of wheat sown, but this year, instead of the 700,000 acres that we expected to get, instead of going forward, we have gone back. Is the Government to be blamed for that? We did everything in our power as a Government to try to get the people to realise the danger that lay in insufficient wheat. There is no choice left to the Government now but to call upon the barley. We would like to save one of our biggest exporting industries, but we cannot do it because we cannot face the possibility of a shortage in bread stocks.

"The farmers are the best-off section of our community, and I believe they themselves will admit it. We have people who will say otherwise for political reasons, but as during the economic war I said that the farmers were in the front-line trench and the remainder of the community had to support them in the fight, I now say that the farmers should support the rest of the community. If we do not produce the food ourselves there is not much likelihood of being able to get it elsewhere.

"As time goes on," he said, "the economic situation becomes more critical, and the farmers must do their duty if we are to have food available in the country."

Touching on the recent elections, he said that the Government was not in as strong a position as it formerly was, and it had no assurance now that it could make its view prevail. Sectional interests came in, and a number of people thought they could afford to vote for them. "We hope that when national matters come up for consideration none of those sectional interests will be tempted to put sectional interests before the national interest. If that should happen, then this nation will suffer grievously as a result of not having a Government with a majority over all."

Replying to suggestions that but for proportional representation the Government would be in a bad way, Mr. de Valera said that in thirty out of the thirty-four constituencies the Government had got a majority of the first preference votes, and if the single-vote system had been in operation it would have meant that the relative strengths would be thirty to four.

Of the post-war situation, the Taoiseach said that the country would need more than ever a spirit of co-operation, and spoke of the planning involved in providing against the demobilisation and the return of workers from abroad, and the actual planning for a resumption of the industrial programme, the reorganisation of agriculture, and the development of house-building, civil aviation, transport, ports and harbours, the mercantile marine, roads, drainage and rural electrification.

Dr. Ritter Assassinated

Dr. Ritter, Chief of the German manpower organisation in France, has been assassinated, German Overseas Radio stated last night.

The message said that several terrorists shot at Dr. Ritter when he left his home in the Rue Petrarque by car.

He was 50 and was Chief of the Labour Department at Nuremberg.—(Reuter.)

Senate Electoral Reform Motion Rejected

THE Ard Fheis, by a large majority, rejected a resolution, moved by the West Donegal Comhairle Dailcheanntair, stating that the present method of election to the Senate was unsatisfactory, and should be changed.

Proposing the motion, Mr. Brennan (W. Donegal) said it was not necessary to rake up all the things that had happened in the recent Senate election to prove that the present system was corrupt, and that it was not the best method of electing a Senate. It was difficult to find an alternative, but he suggested dividing the 26 counties into a number of constituencies, made up of a number of counties, each electing its own representatives. The election for Dail and Senate should also be held on the same day.

Supporting the resolution, Mr. Martin O'Dwyer (Limerick) said the smallness of the electorate lent itself to corruption.

Senator Sean O'Donovan said that the Constitution provided for a Vocational Senate, and that could not be changed without a referendum.

Mr. de Valera intervened to point out that in practically every State in the world in which there is a Second House—except in States of a Federal character—there was constant grumbling about the Second Chamber. The ideal Senate, which would check the impetuosity of the duly elected representative Chamber, existed only in imagination. He recalled that it was as a concession to a strong body of public opinion which believed that there was an advantage and safety in having a Second Chamber—it was with a view to meeting that opinion that they had made in their Constitution provision for a Second Chamber. In setting up a Second Chamber however, they did not want a House which was going to block the Government elected by the people or hold up legislation in the national interests, and, therefore, the powers of the present Senate are very restricted indeed. The biggest difficulty, apart from the question of powers, was how to get a satisfactory Chamber elected. A larger number of constituencies would give them nothing more than a replica of the Dail. A vocational Senate, on the other hand, should prove complementary to the Dail and be of considerable advantage. He thought a vocational Senate preferable to a territorial body.

A commission was examining whether it was possible or desirable to set up a form of statutory vocational organisation here. If such an organisation should be set up, it would then be possible to allow these vocational boards to elect Senators, not merely nominate candidates.

Film "Flash" of Neutral Ireland

Members of the Government and delegates to the Fianna Fail Ard-Fheis in the Mansion House, Dublin, last night were the principal "actors" in a March of Time film feature on neutral Ireland.

Dazzling arc lights flooded the Round Room while Mr. de Valera was speaking, and a film camera in the background took a pictorial record of the event. The film, which will include "shots" of the All-Ireland football final, Dublin street scenes, and provincial events with a neutrality angle, will be sent to America for developing, and, after trimming, will run for 20 minutes on the screen.

Cattle Traders Want Cheaper Travel

The Committee of the Irish Live Stock Exporters' and Traders' Association, at a meeting in Dublin last night, appointed a deputation to the Great Southern Railways Company to ask for a reduction in the cost of traders' tickets, which, it was stated, had been substantially increased. The deputation will also seek to have cattle specials dealt with more expeditiously.

Mr. L. Ferris said that he thought the G.S.R. had taken a very shortsighted view in raising the charge for traders' tickets, and that their action would result in a loss.

Mr. John Carroll (Chairman) presided.

Injured Bray Woman Dies

Mrs. Mary Farrell (40), of Wolfe Tone square, West, Bray, who sustained severe head and chest injuries when knocked down by a Bray Fire Brigade engine, which overturned at Glenlucan, outside Bray, last Saturday, died in St. Michael's Hospital, Dun Laoghaire, yesterday.

Eighth Army Takes Great Air Base

BY a powerful triple thrust, Allied Armies yesterday bit deeply into Field Marshal Kesserling's position in the Naples area, Reuter's Special Correspondent cables from Allied Headquarters. Foggia, Italy's largest air base and eastern pivot of the defence line from Naples to the Adriatic coast, was captured by the Eighth Army, which advanced some 25 miles along its whole front.

British forces now occupy heights which give a clear view of Nocera, gateway to the plain of Naples. East of the city the Fifth Army's outflanking wedge has been driven five miles deeper, and has reached Leoni, on the Potenza-Benevento road. North-east, the capture of Foggia, on the cross-country arterial highway to Naples, threatens to roll up the left flank of the German armies opposing the Fifth.

Foggia fell to a strong armoured column of the Eighth Army, which forced its way into the town and through to the vast network of 13 airfields. To reach the landing grounds the columns had to dash 15 miles through the German defences.

There was stiff resistance, and heavy casualties were inflicted on the defenders.

Besides its airfields, the town is also an important communications centre. Some eight roads meet there, one leading to Naples and another to Rome.

Below Foggia, the road junction of Melfi was captured. Venosa was taken later. The whole effect of this forward surge is to increase to the first magnitude the threat to the left flank of the Germans opposing the Fifth Army. They must either fall back quickly or take the risk of being cut off by Montgomery's enveloping movement.

WITH FIFTH ARMY

Although advancing less spectacularly than the Eighth, the Fifth Army is also fighting forward along its whole front.

Biggest advance was on the right flank to Leoni. Here the Germans still hold the higher mountain positions about three miles south-west of Nocera. There is fierce fighting in Caramel Pass — this must be opened up before armour can get through—which commands the neck of the Sorrento peninsula, and from it the road swings north-west to Nocera and drops to the open plain. The Germans are fighting hard, and the battle has been assuming the character of a race against the rains. The battles for the plain are particularly savage.

In the air, the Allied main striking units were grounded yesterday by bad weather, for the second day in succession, Reuter states. American fighter bombers, however, delivered three telling dawn blows —on Viterbo aerodrome, 40 miles north of Rome; the seaplane base on Lago di Bracciano, also north of Rome; and on railway communications 80 miles north of Foggia.

A despatch from Stewart Sale, Reuter's Special Correspondent with the Fifth Army, says the time factor is increasing in importance in the battle for Naples.

In this area the Germans can hope to put up an affective defence, as there are strong points at every village and cross-roads. The Italians put them there as a precaution against invasion, and they are presumably sited for all-round fire.

President Roosevelt last night described the fall of Foggia as one of the most important Allied successes yet from the strategic point of view.

The President said that this victory brought the Allied air forces nearer Germany and would permit air cover for all operations in future in Italy and on the Adriatic coast, especially in Northern Italy.

Electricity Charges to Be Increased

Electricity will cost more in Eire from November 1st, according to an Electricity Supply Board announcement last night. Public lighting charges are to increase by 10 per cent., as are slot meter, current limiter, coin limiter and unmetered supply charges. A 20 per cent. increase for all other supplies, in substitution for the 10 per cent. increase already in force, is also announced. The extra charges apply to all areas.

In an explanatory statement the Board says that revenue in the past two years has not been sufficient to meet expenditure, and the deficiencies have been met from a contingency reserve fund accumulated in earlier years. This fund is now exhausted, and the Board has no alternative but to increase prices in an effort to cover to some extent increased costs.

The Board's present output greatly exceeds that of Ardnacrusha, which in the past year generated 294 million units. An additional 120 million units were generated at Pigeon House. Coal costs alone per unit generated at Pigeon House are three times the pre-war cost, and output is limited by restricted supplies and inferior quality coal. Increase in expenditure can no longer be met, as it was before the war, by expansion in output and increase in revenue.

High Prices for Bloodstock

The brighter outlook, apparent in the horse-breeding industry in recent months, was reflected in the high prices paid for yearlings at Messrs. Goff's Sales, at Ballsbridge, Dublin, yesterday. Totalling 41,490 guineas, or an increase of 20,779 guineas on the figure for the corresponding day of last year's sales, they included the record price of 2,600 guineas paid by Mr. Joseph McGrath for the Hilltown Stud filly, by Panorama out of Thirteen. One hundred and twenty-nine lots were disposed of. Many purchases were made on behalf of cross-Channel interests.

Greek Island Occupied

German troops have occupied the big Greek island of Corfu, at the entrance to the Adriatic, opposite the heel of Italy, the German News Agency declared yesterday.

Berlin also stated that German troops had stormed the Dalmatian port of Split—also known as Spalato—on the Dalmatian coast, which had been occupied jointly by Italian and partisan forces.

The Corfu landing was carried out "after an ultimatum had been rejected by Badoglio's troops, who had occupied the island.

A Yugoslav message states:—"Heavy fighting continues in the Split sector, particularly near Sinj and Drnis.

"Units of the second division, which have captured the town of Plevlje, in the Sandzak Province, continued to advance, and scored further successes. Units of the 10th Herzogovina Brigade, which captured Gacko, in Southern Herzogovina, have continued to advance, and are pressing the enemy further back."—(Reuter.)

Post-war Openings for Irish Doctors

A suggestion that a corps of Irish doctors should be mobilised for relief work in Europe after the war was made by Mr. R. J. P. Mortished yesterday when he lectured to the Irish Women Citizens' Association in Dublin.

Giving details of food supplies in Europe, Mr. Mortished said that in Antwerp sufficient food could be obtained only on the black market, where it cost three times as much as the average working man could afford to pay.

World News in Brief

Thirty Years For Spies.—Two men who pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to violate the War-Time Espionage Act were, in New York yesterday, each sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment.

Five Killed in Explosion.—A communiqué issued by the Portuguese War Ministry last night reported that five privates were missing and eleven wounded as a result of an explosion in Amsixoeira fortress, near the new Lisbon airport.

Fascist Government.—Paris radio last night reported from Rome that the Fascist Republican Government met under Mussolini yesterday and decided to move the seat of Government to another Italian town near General H.Q.

A Mule Foals.—A mule has given birth to a foal on a farm near Dundee, Natal. Mules are regarded as sterile, and when the unusual event was reported the farmer rode out and found the mule suckling the foal, which she would not allow him to approach.

Armed Robbers Take £22,000.—Six armed men stole £22,000 yesterday when they held up a car on its way to the Modderfontein Dynamite Factory in Cape Province, says a Reuter message from Johannesburg.

'Plane Sinks Three U-Boats.—A United States 'plane, flying from an escort carrier on Atlantic convoy duty, destroyed three German submarines and damaged a fourth, it was officially announced in Washington yesterday.

7,000 Miners on Strike.—About 7,000 miners are now involved in the unofficial Scottish coal strike. More Lanarkshire men have ceased work, and have been joined by men in West Stirlingshire and East Dumbartonshire.

Effects of British Rationing.—Mr. Dalton, President of the British Board of Trade, said yesterday that clothes rationing had in just over two years saved 500,000 tons of shipping space and released more than 500,000 men and women for the fighting forces and direct war work.

SOVIET Check to Giraud's Authority

THE French National Committee yesterday in Algiers strove to end the controversy arising from the inception of the Corsican campaign under General Giraud's sole authority. The outcome of a four hours' session in Algiers was the appointment of General Legentilhomme as Commissioner of National Defence.

Legentilhomme, Reuter despatches indicate, is responsible to the Committee and is to control all matters outside the rigidly military sphere.

A communiqué issued later disclosed the Committee's adoption of a decree dividing the French forces into two categories, one at the disposal of the C.-in-C. for operations and the other under the direct authority of General Legentilhomme. The situation now is that General Giraud has lost some of his supreme jurisdiction in the military field, but the members of the Committee, on the other hand, have failed in their efforts to establish the French Republican tradition of the supremacy of civilian over military power, in that four civilians nominated by them for the defence post were rejected.

Latest news of operations in Corsica is a German report of fighting in the outskirts of Bastia, with German positions—according to an Algiers broadcast — being reduced hourly. On the east coast the Germans have abandoned Aleria.—(P.A. and Reuter.)

Churchill Has No Fear of Future

DECLARING that he had no fear of the future, Mr. Churchill told more than 6,000 women at a Government conference, at the Royal Albert Hall, London, yesterday: "Let us go forward into its mysteries, let us tear aside the veils which hide it from our eyes, and let us move forward with confidence and courage."

The British Premier said that the conditions existing in Britain presented an incomparable example among the United Nations of unified, concerted war effort. The effort of the 46 millions living in Great Britain and Northern Ireland was justly admired by their Allies. Upon the whole, there was no community engaged in this war which was more smoothly, effectively and exhaustively organised for war; there was no community which presented so many different sides and varieties of war effort. That war effort could not have been achieved if the women had not marched forward in millions and undertaken all kinds of tasks.

LARGER ARMIES

We are fully extended now, he said, and what we have to do is to maintain this effort through the fifth year of war, or the sixth year of war if need be, for we will never stop until we have achieved our purpose.

In the forthcoming year you will see larger armies fighting, you will see more powerful air forces striking at the heart of the enemy's country, but the actual demand made upon the British population cannot be greatly increased.

The hope of the enemy, said Mr. Churchill, is that we shall get wearied; that the democracies will faint and falter on the long road, and that now, in the fifth year of the war, there will be doubts, despondencies and slackness. Then they hope that out of this they will be able—consolidated in the central fortress of Europe or in the remote home islands of Japan—to extract from our weariness and from any division which might appear among us the means of making terms to enable them to repair their losses, re-gather their forces, and to open upon the world in—it may be a decade—another war, even more terrible than that through which we are passing. Therefore, the ideas of total war, of fighting for life, must be continually in your minds.

Supreme Allied Military Commander

President Roosevelt yesterday refused to confirm or deny reports that General Marshall is to be named Supreme American-British Military Commander, but strongly indicated that such a move is under consideration.

The President said he had no facts with which to answer the question, but that such matters may have been discussed with no decision.

Members of the House Military Affairs Committee said in the House yesterday that Congressional criticism of the American High Command and of General Marshall's status was seriously affecting the war effort. Representative Thomas said: "General Marshall expressed his regret and deep concern at some of the statements in this House and in the Press, and hoped they will not be repeated."

Mr. A. J. May, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, said that General Marshall had assured him that there was complete harmony among the high officials of the War Department and the Administration.

Mr. W. G. Andrews said he considered General Marshall "preeminently fitted" for the task of Global Commander.—(Reuter.)

Italian Liners Scuttled

The Italian luxury liners Rex and Conte di Savoia are reported to have been scuttled by their Italian crews, according to a Reuter message from Taranto. The Rex was scuttled at Trieste and the Conte di Savoia at Venice, it is stated

The new Italian battleship, Impero, which is said to be nearly completed, is in German hands at Trieste, and the 24,470-ton Vulcania has been captured by the Germans in the Adriatic. Her sister-ship, the Saturnia, has arrived at a Southern Italian port.

Many large Italian and French steamers taken from Marseilles have been captured by the Germans at Genoa.—(Reuter.)

Four Italian destroyers trying to escape from the port of Patras were attacked by German 'planes, but two managed to get away, presumably to an Allied port.

Facilities to whole-time vocational teachers and national teachers to attend the Oireachtas Festival have been granted by the Department of Education. Special leave with pay may be granted.

FORCES ACROSS CENTRAL DNIEPER

Hold on White Russia Strengthened

THE Red Army has now a firm grip on the Dnieper's east bank, Reuter's Special Correspondent cables from Moscow. The fiercest fighting is going on for the remaining German bridgeheads between Kiev and Zaporozhe.

Last night Berlin radio reported fresh crossings of the Central Dnieper, claiming that the Russians were engaged and hemmed in after bitter battles.

A late message from Moscow states that Soviet forces advancing into White Russia are only 10 miles from Gomel.

The Red Army's advance into White Russia—key to Poland and the Baltic States—is now assuming promising proportions, Reuter's correspondent cabled from Moscow.

Only four days after the capture of Smolensk Russian troops advancing on a front of more than 200 miles are well on the road to the key towns of Mogilev, Orsha and Vitebsk, three vital points on the road to Minsk, capital of White Russia and anchor of the old Minsk-Odessa line.

Russian forces, he states, are less than ten miles from Gomel, fourth of the key strongholds covering Minsk, and are closing in rapidly from the east, south-east and south.

On the southern battlefront the struggle for the Dnieper crossings is developing into one extended battle along th whole 300-mile stretch of river from Kiev to Zaporozhe. Between Kiev and Cherkassy, 100 miles to the south-east, Russian forces are already across the Dnieper and have established bridgeheads on its west bank, according to front despatches, though there is no official confirmation of these as yet.

Opposite Dneopropetrovsk, in the crook of the Dnieper bend, three Russian forces have begun the crossing of the river.

At the two key bridgeheads—opposite Kiev and at Kremenchug—the Germans have brought up fresh divisions, increased their air support, and are using a tremendous concentration of artillery. Their resistance is being gradually worn down, the correspondent states, and Kremenchug, on the east bank, is being taken into a steadily narrowing grip.

DNIEPER ISLANDS

The German News Agency said last night that in the Kiev area the Russians attempted to occupy in strength some of the Dnieper islands north of the city. "Numerous boats, ferries and rafts were destroyed," it is stated.

A fierce battle at the gates of a suburb of Melitopol, on the Kharkov-Crimea railway, and new Russian attacks in the Kuban bridgehead were also reported last night by the German News Agency.

In the Kuban bridgehead, according to the German Agency message, the Red Army attempted to land reinforcements by gunboats in the south of the Taman peninsula, but were driven off.

The Soviet communiqué claimed steady advances on all fighting fronts, and the capture of more than 1,000 places, 300 in the Vitebsk direction, 200 in the Gomel direction, and over 500 in the direction of Mogilev.

Anti-Submarine Warfare Success

Rear-Admiral F. S. Low, Assistant Chief of Staff of the United States Fleet for Anti-Submarine Warfare, told a radio audience that the position of the United States in the battle of the Atlantic against U-boats was good—the best yet—and had been all the summer.

The Admiral said that from May to August this year over 4,000 ships of the United Nations crossed the Atlantic safely in convoy. Of the total number convoyed, less than one half per cent. were lost through U-boat action.

Long range Liberator bombers from a Canadian east coast base have carried out six attacks against submarines of a German "wolf-pack" during a recent two days' running battle in mid-Atlantic, the R.C.A.F. announced yesterday.—(A.P.)

Three German Cities Bombed

The German cities of Hanover, Brunswick, and Emden were bombed by Allied 'planes on Monday night. The British Air Ministry, in announcing this yeserday, stated:—

"Last night aircraft of Bomber Command were over Germany in very great strength. The main force attacked Hanover, where large fires were started. Brunswick and Emden were also bombed.

"Aircraft of Fighter Command, on intruder patrols over Holland and North-West Germany, destroyed seven enemy aircraft.

"Thirty-eight bombers and one fighter are missing."

The German report states that American bomber attempts to penetrate into North-Western Germany on Monday were dispersed by German fighter squadrons, and the intended concentric attack was foiled. Bombs on several localities and rural communities in the coastal district caused losses among the population and damage to property.

DELICATE RUN-DOWN SKINNY MEN WOMEN & CHILDREN

Here is the quick way to STRENGTH, HEALTH AND ENERGY—The Vitamins A and D of COD LIVER OIL in sugar coated tablets, tasting like sweets.
Nothing can equal the marvellous vitamins in Cod Liver Oil. They give health, strength and energy to adults and help in the formation of solid bones, teeth and muscles in thin and rickety children. Few stomachs, however, can stand the sickening, fishy taste and smell of the liquid Oil, and that is why everyone, both young and old, who wants to gain health and strength now takes Jessels Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets. Sugar-coated, they are as easy to take as an ordinary sweet.
Each of Vitamins A and D Insufficient Growth.
● A WONDERFUL "PICK-ME-UP"
Jessels Tablets are chock-full of vitamins A and D, plus reduced iron, calcium and other valuable tonic ingredients. Every day thousands of weak, thin, run-down men, women and children are putting on much needed weight—gaining new strength and energy with these tablets. One little boy put on 11 lbs. in seven weeks and is now robust and happy. A very thin woman put on 10 lbs. in 22 days; whilst an underweight man gained 18 lbs. in 3 months, and never felt better in his life. Jessels Tablets are especially recommended during convalescence and for fighting the ever-increasing menace of Rickets.
STOP CATCHING COLD & 'FLU
You are bound to suffer from frequent colds if you lack a sufficient amount of Vitamin A. Shortage of this important Vitamin weakens your resistance and exposes you to 'flu and other infections. The delicate organs of the nose and throat, in particular, become more fragile.
Deformed and decayed teeth lay the blame are the result of a shortage of Vitamin D in the system. This essential Vitamin is necessary not only for children but for pregnancy and while nursing, but also to growing children for the healthy formation of their teeth and bones and for the prevention of rickets.
OUR UNIQUE GUARANTEE
Buy to-day from your Chemist, a box of Jessels Tablets. You will be delighted with the astonishing results, even after the first few days. Continue giving them to your children and take them yourself for 30 days. Your appetite will improve and you will enjoy more energy and, remember, if you do not put on 5 lbs. weight your money will be refunded.
Sold only by Chemists at 1/6 and 3/6 per box.

FASHION PARADE

The new short-skirted dinner dress was featured at the opening of the Autumn Fashion Parades at Messrs. Arnott and Co., Ltd., Dublin, yesterday.

Judging by the models shown, the wool two-piece is a favourite style, and unusual colour contrasts, such as honey and grape, violet and fuchsia, and nigger and olive, were introduced.

Sequin and bead embroidery and draped corsages gave character to a number of attractive afternoon dresses, many of which were carried out in pastel shades.

Several fur coats were shown, including a smart mink model with matching mink-trimmed toque.

The parades will continue all this week.

CASSON EXHIBITION

"It is impossible to approach this exhibition in the light of technique, of comparison with the work of other painters, of the influence of modern movements in art," said Mr. Micheal MacLiammoir, when opening an exhibition of modern painting by Christopher and Kay Casson at the Country Shop, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, yesterday.

"Christopher and Kay Casson," he said, "have a trick of looking at things with the eyes of childhood, and of putting down what they see with admirable simplicity. Their world is intoxicated with gaiety as a bee is intoxicated with honey.

"I think that the first thing to strike one in these picture is their feeling of an impossible happiness, of a fairy tale incredibly come true."

Romance and Reality

A new Irish language movement, Comhdhail Naisiunta na Gaedhilge by name, will hold its first meeting next month in the Mansion House. Its avowed object is "to secure co-operation between all the Gaelic organisations and all the friends of the nations language"; it will be characterised by its "wide views and elasticity of programme," and will impose no conditions "of race, creed, or opinion" upon those who are willing to assist in the language movement. Thus one more is added to the list of organisations determined to restore the tongue of the Gael to the people of Ireland. The Gaelic League has been working for fifty years in that cause; the G.A.A. has stood by it; Glun na Buaidhe has braved the hostility and the hosepipes of the University College students for it; Ailtiri na hAiseirghe, in their published manifesto, have announced their intention to make the language the foundation of Irish life, and "reject the heresy that Ireland can or should become bi-lingual." The Government has done all in its power, by appeals to patriotism, to persuade the people to assist in the revival of the tongue; and, apparently in the belief that cupidity may provide a stronger motive than patriotism, it has established a scheme by which parents are paid two pounds a year for every child so long as they can prove that Irish is the regular language of the household. In spite of all this effort, a speaker at the Fianna Fail Ard Fheis can say that "during the past ten years Ireland has lost more ground in the Gaeltacht than during any previous twenty years, even under British rule." Other speakers remarked upon the slow progress of the language revival, and called upon the Government to set up an organisation—yet another! — to overcome the obstacles. Mr. Sean O Duallachain made the final confession of failure when he recommended that, if necessary, they must use, to re-establish the language, "the methods used by their oppressors to exterminate it." Even Mr. de Valera admitted that, in spite of the cramming done in schools, boys and girls abandoned Irish when they left school. The whole picture is of a costly failure.

Mr. de Valera told the Ard Fheis, with that touching faith which characterises all his utterances on the subject, that he believed that the great majority of the people was anxious for the restoration of the language. We are convinced that the great majority of the people would not care the proverbial tinker's curse if the language were relegated at once to the National Library, and never heard again. The people are interested in realities; they ask for bread, and they do not want to be offered an Irish grammar. Once and for all, it is time that Mr. de Valera left his Cloud-cuckoo-land and came down to look at the ordinary man. Thousands of our people are under-nourished; thousands are ill-housed; thousands suffer from preventible diseases; thousands are cramped by bad education in tumble-down schools; thousands have gone abroad to work, because their own land could offer nothing but linguistic "poppycock"; and the head of the Government still insists that the Irish people prefer this windy diet to any other. The language movement has failed, because the people are not interested. The revival of Irish aroused popular enthusiasm when it was a political catch-cry, the symbol of revolt; but the British power has left Ireland, the revolt is over, and what is needed now is hard work. What advantages Ireland is to derive from the revival of the Gaelic language nobody now troubles to explain; but it has become an article of faith that by its means alone can the country preserve its mystic quality of "nationhood." There is little use in prating about patriotism to men who are given no cause to be proud of their country. Irish "nationhood" will be secured not by any language, but by solid achievement. Mr. de Valera says that Ireland will be in danger until the last shot is fired. Unless he and his Ministers climb off their hobby-horse and study realities, the country will face still greater danger from the peace.

Words, Words, Words!

Somebody—one of those people who for ever must be computing something or other—has worked out that the average man speaks in a day no fewer than 216,000 words. The immediate effect of this revelation upon any man of normal sensitivity is to turn him for days into a monosyllabic mummy; for he cannot but feel that, if that lay figure, the average man, can produce such a volume of chat in twenty-four hours, he himself must be a monster of garrulity. 216,000 words are the length of about three modern novels; and it is said to be "quick work" to write a novel in three months. In twenty-four hours, then—indeed, in less than twenty-four, for an average man must spend eight hours daily in sleep, and about another one hour eating; and one must assume that he will be normal enough not to talk in his sleep, and polite enough not to talk with his mouth full—in about seventeen hours, more accurately, he tosses away as many words as would represent to a novelist nine months' work. Simple arithmetic will show that this gives him an output of over 12,000 words an hour, or about 200 a minute. This calculation, it must be observed, refers specifically to the average man. It makes no claim to estimate the flow of oratory of a door-to-door salesman, an election tout, an old soldier who has missed the last 'bus to Bray and is in urgent need of a cup of tea, or Mr. James Dillon; for the individual output varies very considerably. There was Mr. Wardle's Fat Boy, for instance, who cannot have spoken more than a couple of hundred words in the whole of his recorded life. There are polar explorers and Scotsmen. There are Dail backbenchers, who are generally agreed to be no more vocal than a giraffe. All these help to balance the account. If there are wives, there are also husbands. In the end, between the swings and the round-abouts, Seán Citizen—who always has considered himself a strong, silent man—finds himself guilty of daily conversation to the tune of nearly a quarter of a million words. If it is true that sound never dies—that all the words that ever were spoken, the Funeral Oration to the Athenians and the Gettysburg Address and Mr. MacEntee's election speeches, vibrate endlessly through space—is it any wonder that we cannot hear the music of the spheres?

HOSPITAL COOKING IN EMERGENCY

An official announcement points out that in the event of the country being involved in hostilities there is a possibility of failure of normal cooking facilities in hospitals—failure of gas or electricity. The A.R.P. branch of the Department of Defence has purchased field kitchens and boilers, which have now been distributed to various hospitals and similar institutions throughout the country. With the authority of the Minister for Co-ordination of Defensive Measures, or his representative, this equipment may be transferred from where it is at present stored to any hospital requiring it in the circumstances mentioned.

NORTHERN RENT BILL

The Rent Restriction Law (Amendment) Bill passed its Report stage in the Northern Ireland Senate yesterday when the House went back on its decision not to include the Poor Law Valuation among the circumstances which rent tribunals should consider.

Speaking on the Government amendment that this clause should be re-inserted, Mr. J. G. Leslie said that the Government was coming more or less cap in hand to entreat the House and he did not propose to divide the House on the question.

The bill now provides that, in addition to the valuation, the cost of renovations and repairs to dwellings will also be taken into consideration.

The House rejected an amendment that Courts should have power to rescind or vary judgments given before the passing of the Act.

THE ARMY

The following Captains have been promoted to be Acting Commandants:—S. F. O'Beirn and J. J. McHale. Second Lieutenants to be Lieutenants—G. M. Gill, J. O. F. Purcell, T. P. O'Brien, G. R. Almond. Captain P. J. M. O'Neill has retired, and Lieutenant P. B. Cullen has resigned.

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By Myles na gCopaleen

WHAT is civilisation, democracy, the western way of life? Is it not simply the evolution of a multi-cell social organism? One is urbane, civil, sympathetic; one is part of a community, one has to toe the line.

Very well. But why do so many of our people, half-blind, hard of hearing, interpret this latter sentence as "toe the lion"?

I mean new post-war world, reconstruction of human society, pool all material wealth, atlantic charter, confederation of the united states of Europe and Ireland, free dentures, ten pounds a week for all school children, and no more mud in the streets.

I Have Been Wronged!

The London Daily Telegraph is of course a very fine paper—I read it every day, and it has practically cured my blushing trouble, not to mention that dreadful hammering in my head. It is owned by Lord Kemsley. We do not speak, of course—long years ago I found that he was passing off my jokes as his own, and worse—attributing to my asiatic eminence certain jokes devised by himself and subsisting in that stratum of taste that one can define only as . . . well, English. When Yeats and I quarrelled violently—we were in the Cliveden Set at that time, God help us—Kemsley made overtures through Glenavy suggesting that we should be reconciled and the editorial chair of the Leeds Mercury" (I think it was) was dangled as a bribe. Pshaw! Editory-al is how I spelt the word. Imagine my honour living in Leeds and counselling the British people to be conservative!

"In view of the vogue of this drug (which takes care of everything from pneumonia to what your uncle Joe had), why not revise the primary medical degrees to read M. and B., B.Ch., B.A.O.?"

I quote from my honourable self, October, 1942. Referring to my charts, I find that this joke is Grade C, Class 5Z, Serial No. 870611, deemed in the ledgers as "a hard-faced medium joke, strong sanded finish, suitable teachers, "businessmen," Knights, Masons, all middle-class categories; not to be exported."

Yet referring to the Daily Telegraph of Friday the 17th September, 1943, I read this:

"A QUESTION OF DEGREE. Owing to the widely extended use by doctors of a new remedy it has been suggested that their qualifying degrees be altered to M. and B., Ch.B."

At least let us have done with the sneer that what England had twenty-five years ago, Ireland has to-day. (That crack is true only of Mr. de Valera).

My Stern Reply

One more word and I have done. I am still boiling with rage. I will get my own back, as the car-smash patient said when he woke up to find that the wily doctors had grafted on to him his deceased uncle's spine. Listen to this horrible lampoon:

When the "Daily Telegraph"
Thinks it needs a belly-laugh
It lifts it out of "Cruiskeen Lawn"
Conspuez la perfide Albion.

Next thing you know you will have my very fine jokes included in the publications of the Department of Industry and Commerce under "invisible exports." But I do think these British press lords should play cricket, I mean. Fair play and all that.

GIRL GUIDES IN OMAGH

When Lady Baden-Powell, Chief Guide, visited Omagh yesterday for the inspection of Girl Guides from Tyrone and Fermanagh she enjoyed a drive on an outside car provided by her host, Mrs. Hammond-Smith. She was met at Crevenagh with the outside car, and, in the company of Mrs. Cochrane, County Tyrone Commissioner, drove to Edenfel, where she received a rousing welcome from the Guides. Lady Baden-Powell later visited Derry.

THE MAGDALEN CHURCH

Two days of continuous intercession are being observed to-day and to-morrow from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. for the needs of the world in general and for the work of the Church's Ministry of Healing in particular. All who are interested are asked to share by undertaking half-an-hour's prayer time on either of the two days.

There will be Holy Communion each day at 10.30 a.m., and a short period of conducted intercession at 3 p.m.

Partition and Land Planning at Ard Fheis

PARTITION, the Irish language, agriculture, planning and land division were the subjects of principal interest at the 15th Ard Fheis of the 18 years old Fianna Fail Party in the Mansion House, Dublin, yesterday.

The tone of the Conference was unexpectedly quiet, resolutions on political matters being given precedence over those dealing with aspects of the economic situation. Nevertheless, there were some strong criticisms of the Government on such subjects as partition and the advancement of the Irish language.

PARTITION

A feature of a discussion on partition, in which Mr. J. Brennan (West Donegal) accused the Government of having relegated the matter since the beginning of the war, was the speech of Madame E. O'Moore, of Bray, who said she was a Protestant from Northern Ireland living in Wicklow. She claimed that a great deal already had been done in opening the eyes of the people in the North by letting them see the conditions in the 26 counties and the treatment accorded to the minority here. She advocated greater propaganda in Britain, especially to bring the crime of partition home to the ordinary English people.

The suggestion that the 26 counties' minority could do much to help reunion, but had not done their part, was made by Mr. G. Diskin, Dublin; and Mr. R. O hUadhaigh, Dublin, said that a certain section of people preferred to see partition remain for financial or business reasons.

Partition was described by Mr. S. T. O'Kelly, Minister for Finance, as the major political issue in Nationalist Ireland. The opportunity of ending it had not been available in the last four years, but no opportunity to impress the national view on those responsible had been lost.

LANGUAGE TROUBLE

The trouble about Irish, Mr. Sean McCarthy, Carrigaline, Co. Cork, said, was that it was being promoted in the schools simply as a subject taught to meet the requirements of Department Inspectors. No effort had been made to bring the language into religious education.

It was suggested by a number of other speakers that the co-operation of the Churches should be sought, and that the task should not be left to the Gaelic League.

FARM PRODUCE

The best the Government can do—and it is doing it—is to guarantee fixed prices at a fair level for Irish agricultural produce, Dr. J. Ryan, Minister for Agriculture, told the delegates in reply to requests for a five years' plan with a fixed price level. It would be very unwise, he suggested, to fix a price level in view of the uncertainty of the economic position and the value of the pound. The Government had had to fight a well-planned prejudice against the growing of wheat, but, he said, while the Irish farmer, whose expenses had increased by about 50 per cent., was getting 50s. per barrel, with a bonus of 2s. 6d. in the shape of a post-war fertiliser, the British farmer was growing wheat for 36s., although his expenses had gone up by 66 per cent.

Touching upon a fixed price for potatoes, the Minister said that 3,000,000 tons were produced annually, only one-sixth of which went in human consumption, and if a price were fixed higher than the value of stock-feed, the market would be saturated.

Dr. Ryan, referring to a suggestion that farmers ought to be compelled to produce crops quantitatively rather than obliged to till a specified area, said that the Government's policy in relation to agricultural requirements would be announced shortly.

Nothing less than a five years' plan would induce farmers to make the fullest use of their lands. Senator Seán O'Donovan and Mr. P. Beegan, T.D., asserted.

Making his first speech as Minister for Lands, Mr. Sean Moylan, speaking of land division, said that
